EDITORIAL

Things around us are changing faster than we realize. Instead of going out to do research, people are turning to the internet in their own homes and finding success. If you haven't "googled" your ancestor, try it and see what you find. And because of this, we can increase our knowledge and spend our leisure time searching. Prompted by the recent TV programs on PBS and NBC, more people are hunting their ancestors. This leads me to the point of this editorial. Our newsletters should be online. We have 20 years worth of information about this area that is not commercial. Anyone could buy a back copy of the newsletter for a dollar but in ten years, no one has bought one. If there were a need to sell these newsletters, we could, but members have no need to buy something that has already been sent to them. Also, an index would be necessary and there is no index for the majority of years. Our newsletters have been scanned and a program is available to make a index online. This was available on our website for a while until it was decided the club hasn't voted on keeping them there, so they were taken off. We need to vote to put our newsletters online again so that more information will be available to web searchers.

HELP NEEDED

The Research library has need of a person who can spend four hours of time on Saturdays from 10 am until 2 pm, greeting visitors at the Welcome Center on Federal Street. One weekend a month is now vacant. If you could give a few hours once a month, we would be able to fulfill our agreement with the city to have the Visitor's Center open on Saturday. The job requires no experience and is quite enjoyable. Give Carolyn Duncan or Connie Barnwell for more information.

Minutes Highlights January 4, 2010 submitted by Pat Chamblee

Five visitors were introduced and 35 members were present. The treasurer Dot Turpin reported that the CD that matured in December was transferred to Grand South Bank for a better APR. The amount transferred was $11,343.28. Receipts for the month were $850.00 and disbursements were $1,284.29, leaving a balance of $15, 351.00. Carolyn Duncan gave a report on the Research Room. She needs help in copying some information made available on loan by a local man. Our speaker was Dr. Connie McNeil, President of the SC Genealogical Society, who spoke on "Why Southerners are Southern." She invited all to the 25th anniversary of the Edgefield Society and gave information on the annual SC Workshop in July in Columbia as well as the Conference of the National Genealogical Society in Salt Lake City, UT.

Minute Highlights February 1, 2010

Five visitors and 34 members were present at the Anderson County Public Library. No officer's reports were given as time went to the program. David and Renee Gillespie, dressed in period costume, spoke about their individual interests. Renee gave a demonstration on spinning yarn on a spinning wheel, manipulating the yarn and dyeing it. She also explained her costume to the group. David, a musket maker and tombstone carver, gave a history of tombstones, and showed how he etched and carved the epitaphs on slate. He also explained how to clean tombstones. They passed around various items and held a question and answer time. It was an enjoyable program.

Minute Highlights March 1, 2010

After President Bob Carlisle called the meeting to order, Chaplain Dr. Carl Ellison gave the invocation and a report on the Research Room was given by Carolyn Duncan. There were several Genealogical fairs and workshops in the next month that she thought we should participate with a booth or table of books for sale. Motions were made and funds were voted on to accomplish that end. Our June meeting will be a Midway Presbyterian Church, an historical church on Midway Road, arranged by Jamie Wentsky. The program was a panel of three researchers, Laura Holden, librarian at Anderson County Public Library's Carolina Room, Anne Sheriff, curator of Faith Clayton Research Room at Southern Wesleyan University in Central, SC, and Jim Harper, professional genealogist and founder of the Anderson Society answering questions of a genealogical nature from the crowd.. Brochures were given to the 36 members and 13 visitors present.

QUERY

Hello, My name is Nadine Crum. I am the eldest grandchild of William Frank Hunter Jr. I've been trying to make a complete family tree but, as I sure you know, researching William Hunter's in SC gets squirrely real quick. My grandfather told me that he grew up in Williamston, SC. My great grandparents were William Frank Hunter Sr. and Lillie Mae Clardy. My great-great grandmother was Mamie P Walker who married William Jefferson Hunter, my g-g grandfather. I would like to receive your newsletter please. Also, If anyone might have any clues about my ancestors, please forward on my email, I could use a bit of help. The only other thing I can think of that might help: the family is said to have owned a plantation, and they were, at some point, slave owners. Thanks You. Source: Anderson Intelligencer
May 10, 1866

The train on the Blue Ridge Railroad, on Monday morning last, ran over two women named Chastain and Lawson, who had fallen asleep on the track. One of them had a leg broken, with other injuries, from the effects of which she has since died, and the other was badly bruised. They had been in town for several days, and left on Sunday night, according to their statement, and not knowing that the train came down on Monday before day, they fell asleep on the track and met this horrible fate.

Wants Names Old Roads in Piedmont Preserved by Oze E. Horton, Atlanta

Why not stop the destruction of old landmarks, rich in history, traditions and legends, preservation of which would make many places and sections mellow and attractive?

The people of Greenville have has the good sense to preserve the name of Buncombe road leading from Greenville north to Asheville, North Carolina, and down the French Broad river into Tennessee, where thousands of droves of horses, mules, cattle, hogs and sheep have been driven going south during the days before the War Between the States. The road leading south out of Greenville to Augusta, Georgia is another old highway rich in history and mellow traditions, whose name has been wisely preserved.

In the early days of upper south Carolina the highway from Belton north up the ridge, west of the Saluda River, to old Pickensville (located near Easley) was known as the Five Notch road, a name rich and colorful in historic value, but which name seems to have long since disappeared. Old Pickensville was the county seat of old Washington District, embracing what is now Greenville, Anderson, Pickens and Oconee counties, but this district seems to have been subdivided along about 1789 and the districts of Greenville and Pendleton were established. The first named district was named for the late Nathaniel Green of Revolutionary fame and the latter district was named for Judge Henry Pendleton of Virginia. Pendleton District was subdivided into Anderson and Pickens Districts in 1828 and Oconee was cut off of Pickens after the War Between the States.

Old Pickensville was the birthplace and home of the late Gen. Waddy Thompson until he was grown, who was a brilliant orator, member of Congress and Minister Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Mexico

during the late forties

The road, in early days, from Pelzer running west through what is now Williamston, crossing the old Five Notch road two miles west of Williamston, to Anderson (C.H.) was known as the Wilson's Ferry road. That good old name has long since been dropped. Why lose the rich, mellow history and traditions of this name? On this Wilson's Ferry road lived in ante bellum days many prominent families, among whom were the Hammonds, Augustus Vandiver and many others prominent in the history of the section. This Wilson's Ferry road took its name from a distinguished man who lived and owned a plantation where the buzzing city of Pelzer is now located, and owned and operated a ferry on the Saluda river known as Wilson's Ferry. This Mr. Wilson was a member to Congress from his district in the early days of northwestern South Carolina and I understand is buried on his plantation. I hope the D.A.R.'s marked Mr. Wilson's grave as he must have been either a Revolutionary soldier or a friend to the cause of liberty. At any rate he was a prominent man.

The road leading from Anderson, South Carolina, west to old Shallow Ford, just below the location of Earle's bridge, on Seneca river was known for many years as the Shallow Ford road, but, as I understand, the good old primitive name has long since been dropped. This road, after passing over the Shallow Ford on Seneca river, led northwest, one prong going to Knox's bridge on the Tugalo river and the other to Townville.

The south end of the old Five Notch road extended on south of Belton through what is now Honea Path and on down the line of the present Columbia and Greenville railroad, a road used by the people in the Belton and Williamston sections in going to Hamburg and Augusta in the old days.

In the neighborhood of what is now Hodges was a country hamlet known as Dead Fall. This country hamlet's identity and location has almost entirely disappeared. Some years ago I made an investigation, personally, to locate the Dead Fall, and became satisfied that it was situated near what is now Hodges; while I was in Abbeville county I also made inquiry for the ancient site of an old Baptist church located somewhere in that county by the name of Penial, but which has long since disappeared. Though I made diligent inquiry for the location of this old church I failed to find any information that would locate the site of this ancient place. I have heard my father say that the late Rev. Moses Holland (affectionately called Daddy Holland) attended a session of the Saluda association at old Penial church during August, 1828, in Abbeville District, was stricken with fever on this trip, returned home and died. This must have been along about 1828. This good man did a great work for the Christian religion and the civilization of upper South Carolina, and was also a Revolutionary soldier.

There was another road leading out of Belton going southwest via Craytonville and on down into the Antreville section called the Trail road. This name seems to have long since disappeared. This road evidently followed along the line of an old Indian trail or path.

The road from Anderson via Neal's Creek and Craytonville to Abbeville was known as the Abbeville road. A prong of this old Abbeville road turned off at Neal's Creek church, northwest, going out by what is now Eureka, old Midway Presbyterian church and on to Pendleton, and was called the Pendleton road. I have heard my mother, who was reared near Neal's Creek church, say that the coming and going of old-fashioned stage coaches brought quite a thrill to her childish heart when she would hear the blast of the bugle and the grinding of gravel under the wheels of the stage coach. It was something like railroad trains in later years.

The old General's road, leading out of Anderson south through Verannis,(sic) seems to have lost its ancient name, also. This road was named the General's road because the General Muster met at a muster ground on this highway near Verannis.

I do hope that this suggestion will strike a responsive cord with the D.A.R.'s and that they may mark these highways and, if possible, restore the ancient names. If it were not for the good work which they have done in preserving the history of our country much valuable information would have been lost and lost forever.

TEACHING CHILDREN ABOUT GENEALOGY from ANCESTRY.COM

Here are a few reasons and suggestions:

- 1. Provides Kids with a Connection to family
- 2. Passes on a Sense of History
- 3. Gives Them a Context in Which to Understand the World
- 4. Is an Intergenerational Activity
- 5. Enlists Future Members

By teaching kids family history, you have a chance of giving them a lifetime hobby.

Investing in children is an investment in our future. By spending time helping kids understand family history, all of us benefit. A little less history is lost.
